Multiple choice questions

1. Which of the following instructions for Box Model is incorrect? (A) The box model is content, padding, border, and margin (B) from inside to outside Padding is the white space distance between the content and the boundary, the distance between the content and the border (C) the distance of margin, contained in the width and height (D) border in the height range affects the box model size, width and height that were originally set.

2. Which of the following descriptions of each attribute is incorrect? (A) The box-shadow attribute can be used to set the shadow effect of the block, (B) The box-sizing attribute can set the outer boundary, and (C) The border-radius attribute can set the arc of the four corners of the border (D) display Properties can set how elements are displayed.

3. Which of the following descriptions of each attribute is incorrect? (A) the clear attribute sets the block to float; (B) the visibility attribute sets whether the element is shown or hidden; (C) The z-index attribute controls the stacking order of the object (D) position Attributes can be used to set where a web page component is rendered on the web page.

4. Which of the following notes on the flexible layout is incorrect? (A) To make a flex layout, first, declare it as flex or inline-flex in the display attribute (B) The flex-direction attribute sets the direction in which the container wants to stack child elements (C) The flex-wrap attribute sets whether child elements should wrap (D) The justify-content attribute configures the vertical alignment of child elements.

5. Which of the following descriptions of the Grid system is incorrect? (A) Grid must have parent and child elements (B) To use a grid layout page, first declare it as grid or inline-grid in the display attribute (C) The grid-area attribute can be used to set the width of the gap between child elements (D) and the size of the parent element corresponding to the child element can be set in fr units.